Twist

(Skip to after toothless defeats the monstrous nightmare)

the Vikings had chained toothless up. Hiccup was standing in front of an angry crowd.

"EXPLAIN YOURSELF!" roared Stoick.

"Weeks ago I captured toothless, I was going to kill him but I couldn't do it. I set him free and helped him regain flight, an he became my friend," said hiccup.

"FRIEND!" laughed Stoick, along with the crowd, "the beast has obviously got you under some kind of spell, and now, to end it," said Stoick.

He took his axe and headed towards toothless.

"NO!" cried hiccup, racing forward only to be grabbed by Snotlout and held back.

'goodbye hiccup, take care of yourself' thought toothless bowing his head.

Stoick brought down the axe, chopping off toothless's head. Some of the children looked away. Stoick turned round to the crowd, triumphant, he had just become the first in Viking history to kill a nightfury. He turned to hiccup, but what he saw filled him with horror. Snotlout was holding a limp hiccup. Stoick rushed over and checked his pulse, but there was none. Hiccup was dead, just like the dragon. As if they had been two halves of a soul, only needing one to die for the other to join them. Perhaps this was the reason that neither could kill the other, or why they both put each other before themselvesâ€¦.

The next day was hiccup's funeral, the funeral of a young 13 year old boy who's heart stopped beating with his dragonsâ€¦ _yeah yeah, I know I'm not usually one to be dark or murderous. Funny enough, like 'the prophecy', ' what if' and another story I'll post eventually called 'raised by dragons', I thought of this after I watched the movie for the first time. Of course back then I didn't know about this website, and eventually I decided to write it. Lets take a moment of silence for our two heroes.

Adieu hiccup.

Adieu toothless.
